Carpetings, Olicloths, &c., &c.—The Spring campaign in New York may now be considered as fully commenced in all the prominent branches of commercial pursuits, and ameng the numerous cancillates for public paters, which firm from the manifold advantages which they are enabled to hold forth to Southern and Western merchants, and families visiting New York during the ensuing month, as well as those residing in it, eminently justifies the prediction, particularly on account of the extensive sales which they have made this month, that an unprecedented demand for their irmitable poods, embracing all the new styles, colors and patterns—the result of the genium and skill of the Old and New World—inevitably awaits them: and when it is recollected that the senior partner of this admirably conducted and systematiced establishment, Mr. William McGrorty, is a therough master of his business, and one of the most polite, courteeus and accomplished merchants in New York, besides unwaveringly acting under the influence of the lightest sense of hone raud integrity, thus it is obvious and abundantly evident that the most implicit contidence can be reposed in the house by a discriminating community.
